Not illustrated. 1893 edition. Excerpt: ... shaking an hour-glass--all that could alarm and repel has been gathered round this rightly-named King of Terrors. Milton, who has done so much with his stately rhythm to mould the popular conceptions of modern Christianity, has used all the sinewy strength of his magnificent diction to surround with horror the figure of Death. The other shape, If shape it might be called, that shape had none Distinguishable in member, joint, or limb, Or substance might be called that shadow seemed, For each seemed either; black it stood as night, Fierce as ten furies, terrible as hell, And sh * a dreadful dart; what seemed his head The likenessof a kingly crown had on. Satan was now at hand, and from his seat The monster moving onward came as fast, With horrid strides; hell trembled as he strode ... .. So spoke the grisly terror; and in shape So speaking, and so threatening, grew tenfold More dreadful and deform .... but he, my inbred enemy, Forth issued, brandishing his fatal dart, Made to destroy: I fled, and cried out Death! Hell trembled at the hideous name, and sighed From all her caves, and back resounded Death.* That such a view of Death should be taken by the professed followers of a Teacher said to have brought life and immortality to light is passing strange. The claim, that as late in, the history of the vworld^as a mere eighteen centuries ago the immortality of the Spirit in man was brought to light, is of course transparently absurd, in the face of the overwhelming evidence to the contrary available on all hands. The stately * Book ii, from lines 666-789. The whole passage bristles with horrors. Egyptian Ritual with its Book of the Dead, in which are traced the post-mortem journeys of the Soul,
