

Discovering Sitespring: A Practical Guide to Web Site Project Management

Macromedia Sitespring is a flexible Web-based application for managing all aspects of the Web site production process, and was created to facilitate communication between an entire Web production team - designers, developers, engineers, editorial personnel, managers and, most importantly, the client. Sitespring offers an integrated, file-server-based approach to team collaboration, file management and client communications. With this text, systems administrators should gain understanding of the install process, administrating Sitespring and how to configure their server in different ways to streamline their teams workflow. Non-technical team members should gain a better understanding of how to use Sitespring effectively and to its full capacities. Project managers should learn how to quickly create project sites and interact with clients within the teams normal workflow. Web developers should also benefit from the detailed information for customizing their client project site templates.
