

KARTER

Jak, a former Navy SEAL, retired from the Navy and is returning home after two decades of secret missions. He is a decorated war hero with several Purple Hearts, the Bronze Star, and the Silver Star. During war, Jak risked everything for the mission. Now attempting to adjust to civilian life, Jak merely wants live life without incident. Karter finds herself in a psychological evaluation ordered by the court...once again. Emancipated from her mother at 16, Karter has been on her own since. Her mother, however, continues to haunt her by filing paperwork ordering her evaluation. Karter is the type of woman who takes no sh*t from anyone and simply wishes to be left to painting abstract art in her loft. When an odd series of circumstances causes the two to meet, Karter and Jak both question just what it is theyre experiencing. A decade and a half separate them in age, but their time together seems to be seamless and without effort. But theres something Karter isnt telling Jak. And when the secrets begin to unfold, Jak begins an investigation of his own which unveils a past that just might crush him. 5 Star review by Amazon Top 1000 Reviewer, Debbie - This is the story of finding your soul mate and proving that age is nothing but a number. I dont want to give any spoilers, because to me, this story needs to be read and experienced without knowing whats going to happen. I will warn you that theres a part of the story where youll stop breathing, and think to yourself, no flippin way. Keep reading. Itll be so worth it. Karter is one of my favorite female leads ever. Shes hilarious and more importantly, shes strong and confident. She had a not so great childhood and has learned and moved on from it. Karter didnt let it define her. Shes truly bada$$ but loveable at the same time. Jax is the absolute perfect man. Hes protective and tender. The loss and guilt he lived with for years, helped make him a humble and good man. The love both of these characters have for the other was so touching...I loved this book
