

The Cranbury Papermaker

Will he steal her inheritance ... or save it? Arianne Casterton is devastated when her father and his new wife are killed in a train accident. Despite her faith in God, Ariannes grief soon turns to despair when she discovers one-third of everything her father owned has been transferred automatically to his wifes son and heir, Jonas Prestwichsomeone Arianne never knew existed. Jonass mother married a backwoods papermaker much too soon after becoming a widow, embarrassing Jonas who lives among Philadelphias elite. Though hes distressed by his mothers death within a year after losing his father, receiving a portion of the papermakers inheritance feels like justice. God has blessed Arianne with the passion and talent for papermaking in her familys tradition, but the demands of keeping the business going are nearly overwhelming. When Jonas offers to expand her efforts into something more modern and profitable, Arianne is suspicious, reluctant to give up the art of handmade papermaking. But she realizes without his unwanted help she might lose everything anyway. The Cranbury Papermaker is the 2015 release from award winning writer Maureen Lang, author of thirteen previous Christian romance novels and novellas.
