

Plastering: A Craftsmans Encyclopaedia

This book provides an introduction to the techniques of modern plastering, and a comprehensive treatment of present-day fibrous plasterwork. Features include a full outline of glass-fibre work, full technical details of solid work, coverage of obsolete practices for the purpose of restoration and renewal and many working drawings in isometric projection to present a three dimensional picture of specific jobs. The second edition includes an expanded section on fibrous plasterwork to demonstrate the range of its applications, revised sections on grids and relevant British Standards, new entries on the production and application of glass reinforced gypsum (CRG), pricing and production management, health and safety, and a section of worked questions and answers for craft and advanced craft examinations.
